FEATURES

- “Do Not Resuscitate” — Administrative and Ethical Concerns in Prehospital Arrests . . . . . 26
The decision to resuscitate is not always an easy one. Fears of restoring vital functions to a brain dead patient and sympathies for the right to die with dignity are but a few of the concerns facing EMTs and paramedics when presented with a cardiac arrest patient — by Paul McCarthy
- Bystanders: Can They Handle the Pressure? . . . . . 32
Over 20 million U.S. citizens have been trained in CPR. Has the training been in vain? Are bystanders psychologically prepared to administer CPR? — by Elaine Mayer and Stephen Airola
- Spinal Injury in the Unconscious Patient . . . . . 35
Unconscious patients and patients with suspected spinal injuries present their own special challenges to EMTs and paramedics. In combination, the challenges are magnified several times — by William Roush, MD
- Manikin Decontamination . . . . . 40
There have been allegations that Herpes Simplex Virus (HSV) can be (or has been) transmitted through contact with CPR training manikins. Recent research shows that manikin practice is not a health risk as long as recommended cleaning procedures are followed — Staff Report
- Trauma Care: Evaluating Effectiveness with the Injury Severity Score . . . . . 42
The trauma system in central Nebraska is evaluated using the Injury Severity Score (ISS) — by Ann Feddersen
