FEATURES

48 New Directions in Health-Care Financing: Their Impact on EMS

BY VINCENTdePAUL ROBBINS

As health-care costs spiral upward, EMS reimbursement issues are becoming more convoluted and confusing. In today's climate, all signs point toward the adoption of diagnosis-related groups as a cost-containment device.

58 Pulling Your Weight in EMS Politics

BY DOUGLAS M. WOLFBERG

Is politics pulling your EMS system down? Learn how to become an active participant in the political game rather than a mere spectator.

66 Expanding the Choices in COPD Cases (CEU Article)

BY JAN AUERBACH, RN, MSN, EMT-P

Acute respiratory failure is a potentially fatal outcome of chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. But the chances of successfully managing these patients can be greatly improved if the EMS provider recognizes the physiological changes associated with COPD.

83 Trauma Rounds: The Case of the Penetrating Chest Wound

BY KEVIN BROWN, MD, EMT-P, WALLACE CARTER JR., MD,
GARY E. LOMBARDI, MD, FACEP, AND WARREN WETZEL, MD, FACS

In cases of penetrating chest trauma in which cardiac tamponade is suspected, is "scoop and run" the appropriate prehospital approach?

91 EMS and the IRS: Clarifying a Taxing Relationship

BY MILTON ZALL

The differences between employees and independent contractors are relatively small, but they can translate into a big difference in taxes paid to the Internal Revenue Service.

93 Getting Online With the Times: Medical Literature Searches

STAFF REPORT

With more and more EMS professionals using computer data-searches to research current medical literature, the choices in software and hardware are also expanding.

105 Kaisen: EMS as Theater of the Streets

BY KATE DERNOCOEUR
AND MIKE TAIGMAN

What do EMS providers have in common with Kevin Costner and Warren Beatty? No, it's not a nice smile, but the fact that all perform their jobs in the public eye.
