Features

- 26 Twenty-five Years of CPR BY MARY NEWMAN. Never has CPR been so carefully scrutinized as it was at the most recent national conference on standards and guidelines held this July in Dallas. Guided by wise and open-minded leadership, experts in the field were able to take a hard look at the accomplishments, inadequacies and bare-bones purpose of the international resuscitation movement.
- 31 Getting a Computer for Your EMS: Part III: The Software Revolution BY MIKE FRANK, MD. The bottom line for any computer system is not how well it's engineered, nor how fast it runs, and not even really how much it costs, but whether or not it will function properly with sets of instructions called programs or software that will do the things you want to do.
- 45 Software for EMS BY ERICH M. DAUB. Software is the fuel which drives computers, and in a multidimensional field such as EMS, software can drive one in a variety of directions. This article presents an overview of computer software, discusses its EMS applications, and reviews EMS software currently on the market.
