FEATURES

|  |           |
|--|-----------|
| Financial Strategies For Surviving the '80s . . . . .   | 30 |
| In the first of a four-part series on financial management techniques relating to EMS, a finance manager discusses why most systems have been financially foolish in the past, and why none can afford to be so foolish in the future— by Alan Jameson  |           |
| Spinal Immobilization in Deep Water . . . . .   | 35 |
| The patient in need of spinal immobilization in deep water requires special care. The equipment and protocols necessary for safely removing spinal injured victims are detailed— by Gerald Dworkin  |           |
| Maltreatment of Children, Part 2: Understanding the Problem . . . . .   | 40 |
| A report on the research being done to help victims of abuse and the pre-hospital provider's role in documenting suspected cases is presented in this second of a two-part series— by Kate Dernocoeur   |           |
| The Misinformed Public: A Study Measures Public Knowledge of Emergency Medical Services . . . . .   | 45 |
| Errors in judgment by the public over what constitutes an emergency situation can result in unnecessary and possibly life-threatening situations. This study suggests a concentrated effort at improved mass media communications is necessary— by Gary Selnow, Ph.D., Dennis Myers and Scott Hayes |           |
| Drunks Can Be Sick, Too: Treating the Intoxicated Patient . . . . .   | 51 |
| It may be tempting to leave the uncooperative, abusive, intoxicated patient where he lies, but it is necessary to work around those symptoms of illness and evaluate the whole patient— by William Roush, MD  |           |
