Carry-in Equipment
Part 1: Trauma and Med Boxes 24
More frequently used than any other single piece of equipment, "jump kits" take on a special significance in prehospital care. Thom Dick begins his three part series of identifying and evaluating carry-in equipment with a look at trauma and med boxes — by Thom Dick

EMT—Defibrillation
ACT Foundation Issues Policy Statement 37
A pioneer and leading advocate of mobile coronary care and citizen CPR, the ACT Foundation convened a meeting of its medical advisory board to evaluate research and pilot program data and to issue a policy statement on EMT-Defibrillation — Staff Report

A Decade of Service
MAST — Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic 38
The high expense of operating air ambulance services need not prohibit such services. Military assistance to civilian EMS has been shown to be effective — as evidenced by ten successful years of service — by Cmdr. B. Thomas Scheib, et al.

FLATIRON
A MAST Service for Rural Alabama 40
MAST in rural Alabama has been shown to be a reliable, efficient, and cost-effective way to provide air ambulance services — by K. Joanne McGlown

Patterns of Injury
The Forgotten Element of Assessment 46
The most important skill performed by prehospital emergency care providers, assessment, must involve an analysis of mechanism(s) of injury — by Vincentde-Paul Robbins
